

Setting Up the Jewish World

We want to set people up!

There are just too many people in our communities who want to meet that special someone but for whatever reason are not doing so. The results are all too obvious - people marrying later, people not marrying at all and people marrying out. This has serious consequences for Jewish continuity.

You can help to reverse this trend. And it's really easy. We all know someone who would like to meet someone. So, we just need to pool our collective contacts and start making the appropriate matches. A simple introduction is sometimes all it takes to get a relationship on the road.

Of course, the best form of introduction is by recommendation (but you can always recommend yourself). So, we might contact you to get some more details about the person you are recommending or even for you to get that person in touch with someone else.

Please take a minute to fill in the form over the page. If you are recommending more than one person (which we hope you are) just copy the sheet. It's all very well being a little pushy on this important matter, but you should check first with the person you are recommending to make sure it's OK with them.

We will make sure that all information is kept private and only used for its proper purpose.

Thanks for doing your bit to set up the Jewish world.
